

ABSTRACT

A measuring device comprising a sensor capable, through slideable displacement, of detecting alternating reflective and non-reflective markings on surfaces which can be planar or curved, and can be of any length. The output of said sensor can be utilized by other devices, to determine distance, velocity, acceleration or other factors.